

New Graduate Student Guide

2004 Edition

INTRODUCTION

This guide contains important information to help make the transition to life as a graduate student at the University of Michigan easier. It represents the collected wisdom of staff, graduate students, and faculty.

Several important events are scheduled within the first two weeks after classes begin to welcome you to the department.

1. The Rackham Student Orientation Fair will take place on Friday, September 3 at Rackham Auditorium, 915 E. Washington, from 9 am to 4 pm. There will be a resource fair, workshops, information on university services and a large reception for students and their families hosted by the dean. All new graduate students are encouraged to attend.
2. All new graduate students are required to attend the Political Science Graduate Student Orientation meeting which will be held on September 13, 2004. Exact details will be announced later this summer.
3. All new graduate students are also required to set up an appointment with the Director of Graduate Studies. Be sure to check in with the Student Services Associate, in Room 5705 Haven Hall, (734) 764-9598, when you arrive on campus to make an appointment to meet with the Director of Graduate Studies. Plan on spending a few minutes also with the Student Services Associate to obtain field guidelines and other useful information.

COLLEGIALITY

The first year of your graduate career will present you with your greatest opportunity to develop a sense of collegiality and community with your peers. Collegiality will be most important within the department, but is also an important facet of cross-disciplinary interaction. The University and the Department provide many opportunities that help to enhance this highly important aspect of your graduate career. It is up to you, however, to take advantage of these opportunities.

Regular social events occur throughout the term. There are occasional parties sponsored by returning graduate students. Other events include the fall picnic and the holiday party. Department-sponsored events are great chances not only to mingle with other graduate students, but also to see faculty outside of the classroom setting.

In addition, the Political Science Graduate Lounge, located on the seventh floor of Haven Hall, offers another opportunity to compare notes with other grad students, catch a quick nap, or eat lunch. Other opportunities for graduate student interaction include sub-field study groups and intramural sports and recreation.

Computer Assistance Program

The Computer Assistance Program (CAP) computer lab is located on the sixth floor of Haven Hall. Most grad students utilize the lab frequently. The Department's Computer Systems Consultant and the lab staff are available to answer questions related to computers and computing at Michigan. The consultant also administers the political science message group, psgrad@umich.edu. This political science message group is an e-mail list for information concerning financial aid, upcoming talks, brown bag presentations, deadlines, and other items of interest to graduate students. You will be added to it in the fall. This list is for faculty, staff and students. Another list gaps@umich.edu is the message group only for students.

Each student is given a university-wide computer account, which can be used for communications and access to university-provided services. The Information Technology Central Services (ITCS) web site, <http://www.itd.umich.edu/>, is a good place to learn about general computer resources at the university.

The first step for you in accessing university computer services will be to acquire a 'username' and password. Rackham is sending you this information after you use the admission website and indicate your intent to enroll. Each month Rackham will email newly matriculated students registration information. These emails will be sent in three batches, June 1, July 1 and August 1. If you do not receive this email message by August 10, consult the Student Services Associates.

Once you have established your account and its associated username, you will have an e-mail address in the form <username>@umich.edu, be able to use public computing sites and printing. Your account on the department's file server for graduate students is maintained separately, but it uses the same username as that provided by ITCS as the account ID. In order to store files on the server and access printing in the department's computer lab, you will need to establish this file-server account as well. For information on how to do this, see the consultant.

THE ABCs of REGISTRATION and ENROLLMENT

Academic Program: To Register You Will Need:

1. A University computer account (a.k.a. unickname) and temporary password. (This will be sent to you over the summer as a batch email from Graduate Admissions).
2. A registration time: graduate students will be allowed to register as they receive a registration appointment through batch email. (When you receive your password, you will know that you have permission to register).
3. A student ID number which you can find out when you access the registration site, www.wolverineaccess.umich.edu.
4. Course selections.
5. To check the "final" fall Time Schedule and Course Guide for available courses. Log on to <http://www.umich.edu/~regoff> or www.lsa.umich.edu to find course descriptions and class details.
6. Contact an instructor for permission to enroll in a class if it is full, and then take a note to the Central Office, 5700 Haven Hall, for an electronic override. Permission is also needed for Independent Study Courses.
7. You should register online through the website, wolverine access. This site will also enable you to review your financial aid and register your local address.

Students with questions regarding the registration procedure should call the Office of the Registrar at (734) 764-6280. Please refer to the class Time Schedules (<http://www.umich.edu/~regoff>) or the University's student information web site, Wolverine Access (<http://wolverineaccess.umich.edu/>) for information concerning open classes, changes in selections, late registration, and fee adjustments. Those who need to be "matriculated", i.e. given permission to enroll and receive the batch email with temporary password, should contact Rackham admissions if this is not received by August 10, 2004.

Credit System: Most graduate courses at Michigan are one term long and are given a value of three credit hours. Credit hours reflect the number of hours a student attends discussions and does outside reading each week during a four-month term. Most graduate courses are classified as proseminars, and they usually meet two hours a week.

F1 Visa Holders: Students with F1 US visas must be registered full-time. Full time is defined as 9 credit hours for those who have not previously earned a relevant Master's degree, and 6 credit hours for those with teaching assistantships. This rule is mandated by federal immigration regulations and monitored by Rackham's International Admissions Office.

Fellowships: Fellowships usually include tuition, stipend, and GradCare (graduate student health insurance). You will need to sign up for GradCare, your health insurance, at Wolverine Tower, the University's business office. Fellowships that are awarded directly from the department are processed by the Student Services Associate, Michelle Spornhauer. Those receiving fellowships through the Rackham Merit program or the International Institute should consult those units for questions on how funds are disbursed.

Full Time Enrollment: In terms of fees, three courses or 9 credits per term is considered full time. Registering for an average of 9 credits over the first four terms satisfies the Rackham requirement of 36 fee units before advancement to candidacy can be authorized.

During the average three years of course work, students are expected to take enough courses to prepare for a major preliminary examination (five courses), a first minor field (three or four courses), a second minor area (three courses), and a cognate area. Students are expected to take two graduate level courses outside of Political Science to fulfill the cognate requirement. Those with advanced degrees should discuss with Lili Kivisto how course work already completed may meet some of these requirements.

Grade Point Average: Graduate courses are graded on a 9-point scale with the highest grade being A+. Students are expected to maintain a 6.0 average (B+) in departmental classes. Students may also elect courses as Satisfactory/Unsatisfactory or Visit (VI) for an official audit. Avoid receiving grades of ED (unofficial drops), which are computed as failing grades on a transcript. EDs are given because an official drop was not correctly processed or because an instructor did not turn in a grade or an incomplete. Take the initiative to find out why an ED was given and work with the instructor to have it removed from your record.

Grades: Instructors are required to turn in grades 48 hours after the completion of the final exam for a course. Grades are available by accessing Wolverine Access, the University's student information web site.

Independent Study Courses: Before registering for one of the independent study courses - PS 691, 692, 891, 892, 990 or 995 - work out the details of the course with your instructor or advisor. Register for the course using the faculty member's independent study number, which will be given to you at the Central Office, Room 5700 Haven Hall. The Instructor will also need to give you permission to take the course. He/she does this by signing a form that you pick up and return to our central office.

Late Registration: After the third week of the term, students must go to the Registrar to make changes in schedules, including late registration, dropping, adding or modifying classes. Pick up a form for this outside in the Central Office, 5700 Haven Hall, and have this signed by the instructor of the course and your advisor. Students may make adjustments until the last day that classes meet in December but will receive a grade of "W" if a class is not dropped during the first three weeks of the term. If you elect a course and never attend, you must drop the course, or an ED (unofficial drop/failure) will be generated by the Registrar. Always check to make sure that a drop has been properly processed.

Late Registration Fee: If you are not registered before the first day of class, a late registration fee will be assessed to your account.

Student Identification Cards or "M-Cards": M-Cards are issued daily in Room 1000 of the Student Activities Building. Consider this card as your passport to the University. You should carry it with you at all times. It gives you access to the library system, recreation facilities, student-priced tickets for University musical, sports, and theatrical events, and entry to some controlled-access campus computer sites.

Transcripts: Official copies of transcripts may be obtained from the Registrar or ordered through Wolverine Access. Wolverine Access will also allow you to print unofficial copies of your transcript online.

Tuition Bill: Tuition waivers are usually credited directly toward student accounts by the middle of the term. Do not be alarmed if a tuition bill arrives in late September. Some fellowships may not cover registration and other student fees, so it is your responsibility to pay the fees by the due date on your bill in order to avoid being assessed late charges. Registration fees are approximately $90.00 a term. You can check the fees you owe through Wolverine Access.

Wolverine Access: Wolverine Access (<http://wolverineaccess.umich.edu/>) provides a summary of course availability, academic records, financial aid status, and your bill. It will allow you to check your status on these matters.

Helpful Hints:

1. The beginning and end of each term are the busiest times for campus resources such as the cashier's office and campus computing sites. If you can get to these places as early in the day as possible (9:00 am), you will have better luck beating the undergraduate crowd.
2. Given the busy nature of most professors' schedules, it is sometimes better to use e-mail to contact them. This is truer for younger faculty than older, although generalizations are difficult to make.
3. Most classes, unless otherwise specified by the professor, start ten minutes after the time printed in the Time Schedule. This is known as "Michigan time."

Some Advice about Getting Advice

Please be careful about whom you ask for advice. You will have many questions about the program, financial aid, specific courses, and so forth once you have entered the program. Your best course of action is to go directly to the people who are responsible for the area about which you have questions. The following is a list of possible sources of information that can provide you with accurate answers.

Program Requirements:

- Director of Graduate Studies
- Student Services Associate
- Departmental Guidelines
- Webpage resources such as the handbook and the graduate catalog

Financial Aid:

- Director of Financial Aid
- Student Services Associate

Subfield Requirements:

- Subfield Coordinator
- Field Guidelines

Rackham Graduate School Requirements:

- The Rackham Graduate Student Handbook,
<http://www.rackham.umich.edu/StudentInfo/Publications/GSH/html/contents.html>

Faculty Specialties: If you are interested in studying with a specific professor or studying a particular topic, you should speak directly with that professor. You should inquire about their plans as far as what courses they intend to teach and their availability for supervising the type of program in which you are interested. You will also find information about faculty research interests in the faculty section of the webpage.

REGISTRATION

Putting Together A Schedule

Students can register through the web after receiving their usernames. Students are encouraged to register before the first day of classes to avoid paying late fees. Online registration will allow students to drop, add, modify, and waitlist classes. Every class has its own course number.

Tips On Classes:

1. Most graduate courses are small, but sometimes courses become crowded. Check with the instructor about signing up for the wait list or receiving permission (formerly known as an “override”) to register, if necessary.
2. Graduate courses (except for language classes and research methods) normally meet for two hours a week. 600-level courses review the literature in a field. 700-level research seminars enable students to work on independent projects.
3. Courses in other Rackham departments may be elected as cognates. When you sign up for a cognate, make sure that you sign up for graduate credit. You can do this by checking the graduate catalog for a list of other departments’ graduate courses and using the graduate-level course number when courses are cross-listed.
4. Some courses, such as languages, may be taken for undergraduate credit. A notation to this effect will appear on your registration schedule and the grade will not be computed in a graduate grade point average.
5. Grading is on a nine-point scale with the highest grade being A+ (9.0). Students are required to obtain a B+ (6.0) in political science courses for credit to be given. Students are strongly encouraged not to take a grade of Incomplete in a course. A student has two semesters, including spring/summer, to make up incomplete work.
6. Full-time enrollment is defined as 9 credit hours, which is usually 3 graduate classes. However, students are encouraged to take more units than this to acquire training in methods, language, computer usage, etc. A normal class load for an entering student would be 9-12 credit hours. It might include the introductory statistics course, the proseminar that covers the student’s major or first minor field, and specialized courses chosen according to interest (e.g. War, East Asia, Voting Behavior, etc.).

Other Points to Remember:

Remember that course work is just the start of your education and career. Other words of wisdom for first year students include:

1. Join the American Political Science Association, <http://www.apsanet.org/>, and you will receive the APSA journal, "American Political Science Review." Student memberships are $37 a year. The address of the American Political Science Association is: American Political Science Association, Membership Secretary, 1527 New Hampshire Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20036.
2. Plan on attending departmental events in relevant subfields. These include lecture series, brown-bag presentations, and job talks. Join e-mail groups that include presentations from other units such as the Center for Political Studies, ISR, or area centers at the International Institute.
3. You may also wish to join other relevant professional organizations in your field in order to receive their journal and take part in their annual meetings.
4. Start a filing system to outline the articles you read for each class. These can be used in the future to review for preliminary examinations or as a start for preparing a bibliography for teaching your own classes. They are absolutely essential to the successful completion of your graduate work.
5. Work with a faculty member or fellow student to prepare a professional paper. There are opportunities to present student papers at conventions, such as the Midwest Political Science Association Meeting, and at conferences both at Michigan and at other locations.

FINANCIAL MATTERS

There are a number of financial aid offices around campus, each with a specific purpose. Some are listed here with the hope of helping you avoid confusion later.

Office of Financial Aid: 2011 Student Activities Building (SAB), (734) 763-6600. This office handles applications for National Direct Student Loans, Guaranteed Student Loans, and also maintains a list of work-study positions available through the University: <http://www.finaid.umich.edu/Employ/>.

Student Accounts: 2226 Student Activities Building (SAB), (734) 764-7447 or toll-free at (877) 840-4738. This office is a division of Student Financial Operations, <http://www.sfo.umich.edu/>, and handles billing questions and disbursement issues.

Rackham Office of Fellowships and Recruitment: 0120 Rackham, (734) 764-8119, <http://www.rackham.umich.edu/Fellowships/>. This office administers the Barbour Scholarship, Rackham Merit Fellowship, Rackham Predoctoral Fellowships, University Fellowships, One-Term Rackham Fellowships, and Research Partnerships. In all cases except the Research Partnerships, a student must be nominated by the Department to be considered for the award. The department will keep you apprised of any forthcoming scholarships, fellowships, or grants.

Graduate Student Instructorships (GSI): We offer assistantships on a competitive basis to graduate students enrolled in our program. The Financial Aid Committee makes departmental assignments after reviewing the applications and academic files of all applicants. Students work as teaching assistants in their second year in our program and beyond. Applications are distributed in December of the fall term and are due in February of the winter term. You are required to fill out an application even if you have a guaranteed commitment for teaching.

Research Positions: Students may contact individual faculty members about possibilities for employment as research assistants sometime during their program. Research positions at the University of Michigan are often handled through the research centers. Students seeking research positions should apply to the centers directly. Centers, Institutes, and Libraries that have employed political science students in the past include: the Center for Political Studies, the Survey Research Center \(ISR\), the Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy, the School of Public Health, and the School of Education. These positions usually require strong quantitative skills. You can also apply for a summer Rackham research partnership that allows you and a professor to work on a joint research project later in your program.

Tuition Rates: Tuition rates are based on full-time enrollment. Be aware that certain tuition waivers, such as those given with a GSI position, do not cover any fees. Information on your student account is accessible through Wolverine Access.

HOUSING

The most accurate and current information comes from the University Housing Information Office, <http://www.housing.umich.edu>, 1011 Student Activities Building (SAB), (734) 763-3164. Local real estate agents can also direct you to housing. Housing in Ann Arbor can be hard to find and expensive. Try to visit Ann Arbor during the summer to look for a place to live. If this is not possible please plan to arrive at least a week before registration. See the Temporary Housing section below for suggestions on where to stay during your visit.

Campus Housing: Baits (Vera Baits) Housing, Baits I, and Baits II (all co-ed), are situated on Michigan's North Campus in a beautiful setting that affords the graduate and upper-class student a peaceful place to study. There are optional meal plans available for use at Bursley Hall (located near Baits) or at North Campus Cooperatives.

Family Housing: The university offers housing for married couples or same sex partners and for students with children. Northwood Apartments, located on North Campus, offers one-, two- and three-bedroom apartments and condominiums. Free shuttle bus service is provided between the campus and all student housing.

All University apartments have a range and a refrigerator and most are equipped with basic furnishings (linens, bedding, curtains, dishes, and rugs are not included). The efficiency units normally consist of a kitchen with a dining area, bathroom, closet, and a living room with a hide-a-bed. The furnished one-bedroom apartments are similar and have one bedroom furnished with a bed and chest of drawers. Two- and three-bedroom condominiums are usually unfurnished.

Off-Campus Housing: The University Housing Information Office provides an excellent listing of apartments (mostly unfurnished) in the Ann Arbor area along with a map showing where the buildings are located. The web site is www.offcampus.housing.umich.edu/lt/housing_listings.cfm. We strongly suggest that those of you looking for off-campus or married housing write and specify what kind of housing information you will require.

The address for the housing office is:

University Housing Information
The University of Michigan
1011 Student Activities Building (SAB)
Ann Arbor, MI 48109-1316

Extensive unfurnished housing is located from one to five miles away from campus and includes over seventy apartment complexes.

Average rental rates for 2003-04 based on a twelve-month lease, for furnished or unfurnished housing within walking distance of central campus, are as follows*:

Efficiencies $700/mo, One-Bedroom $750-850*/mo,
Two Bedrooms $975-1200*/mo, Three Bedrooms $1400*/mo,
Four Bedroom $1850*/mo, Five Bedroom $2350*/mo.
(*Based on 4% increase in last year's prices).

Hint: Try to find housing in which the rent includes the cost of heat. Most houses are older and without good insulation, Michigan winters can be long and sometimes very cold.

Apartment leads may be obtained from the following sources: The Ann Arbor News, The Michigan Daily, bulletin boards at the Housing Office (1011 Student Activities Building), Michigan Union (basement), Michigan League (first floor), Angell Hall (first floor), and the Graduate Library Lounge (third floor).

The Housing Information Office will occasionally have listings for homes, farmhouses, or cottages farther away from campus, usually within a 45-minute drive. If you are looking for something in a small community outside of Ann Arbor, the closest towns around us are Ypsilanti, Saline, Chelsea, Dexter, Milan, and Whitmore Lake.

Student Cooperative Housing: Student Cooperative Housing has a long history and rich tradition in Ann Arbor, beginning with the first student co-op houses founded in the 1930s. From small beginnings, they have grown into the Inter-Cooperative Council, <http://www.icc.umich.org/>, (ICC), a network of 22 student-owned and -operated houses accommodating nearly 600 students. The ICC co-ops remain one of the most economical alternatives available in student housing. They operate on a room and board plan, with all utilities included, for about $500/month (8-month lease), and about $400/month without meals. This one charge per month covers all basic costs (many include laundry, TV, parking, etc.). Each member makes a commitment to work (four to six hours per week) in the management, maintenance, and day-to-day operation of the house. Each member is also expected to take part in house meetings where decisions and policies that affect the members are made. Membership is open to all interested students on a first-come, first-served basis. Meal contracts are also available for students residing outside the co-op houses. Students interested in this type of housing should contact the ICC office at 337 East Williams, (734) 662-4414.

There are also cooperative townhouses. You pay a fee to join the cooperative, but payments can be less than rental units and you will get your initial fee, plus interest back when you leave Ann Arbor. These are so popular that many have waiting lists, but putting your name on a list and moving in at a later date can pay off in an attractive long-term housing options.

ANN ARBOR AREA and CAMPUS COMMUNITY

The University of Michigan is located right in the middle of Ann Arbor. There are no formal boundaries between the campus and the community. University properties and facilities are spread throughout the city, with the four campus areas placed among commercial and residential areas. Several of Ann Arbor's shopping areas are interspersed with campus buildings. The downtown area is a shopping and business district, which covers just a few blocks and is easily accessible on foot, by bicycle, or by bus.

About half of Ann Arbor's residents are University affiliates - students, faculty, and staff members. Ann Arbor provides a variety of attractions to its residents. Some of Ann Arbor's attractions, such as the Botanical Gardens, the Arboretum, and many cultural events, are affiliated with the University. Other events, such as the Summer Festival and the art fairs are joint ventures between the city, the University, and private organizations and businesses.

Entertainment and Nightlife: Ann Arbor enjoys a lively theater and music scene. Local bands perform regularly in various bars, nightclubs, and coffeehouses. The Ark and The Bird of Paradise are familiar stops for nationally-known blues, folk, and jazz musicians. The Michigan Theater offers art films, classic films, and live concerts. The University Musical Society provides a wide variety of concerts, including famous symphony orchestras, soloists, chamber groups, dance, jazz, and drama from around the world. The departments of Music, Dance, Musical Theater, and Theater and Drama of the University of Michigan keep both students and Ann Arbor residents busy with many different performances, from operas to dance concerts to interactive theater. During the summer, the Summer Arts Festival at the Power Center hosts a variety of well-known performers, while Top Of The Park offers free nightly movies and live bands, all in an outdoor setting. Ann Arbor also offers an incredible selection of restaurants.

Athletic Opportunities: The University's varsity sports schedule kicks off in the fall in the country's largest college football stadium. Student tickets for home games should be purchased immediately after registration at the Athletic Ticket Office (corner of Hoover and State). Bring both your ID card and the athletic coupon that you receive at registration. Football tickets are sold on a first-come, first-served basis, but seating is arranged according to credit hours completed as a U-M student. Admission to the games of many of the varsity sports is free of charge. Any student's spouse may purchase a season ticket or a package plan that allows entrance to all varsity sports just as if he or she had an ID card.

Participation in volleyball, swimming, basketball, paddleball, racquetball, tennis, golf, track, softball, and many other sports are available to students through an informal sports and intramural program. For a fee, you can play golf at the University course on Stadium Blvd. Runners of all sorts can find races in the area. The Ann Arbor Bicycle Touring Society has an extensive ride calendar. There are also university-sponsored groups for sailing and aviation.

There are recreational buildings on campus for student, faculty, and staff use. Most include indoor track facilities, exercise rooms, weight rooms, tennis courts, basketball courts, handball and squash courts, saunas, and swimming pools. Admission is free for enrolled students during the academic year, a small fee is imposed for spouses, and a locker purchased in any one facility entitles you to a transient locker in any other facility. Call the Hotline at the Central Campus Recreational Building on the corner of Washtenaw and Geddes, (734) 763-3084 for details.
